Every video that comes out about this destroys the media narrative and trust in Congress.

If there was ever a way to flip a native THIS IS IT.

Archive these and share everywhere.

You can see the shills in real time trying to explain away all these videos that ruin the narrative.

It's "These videos are out of context! They prove nothing!"

Except that the whole "MAGA violently stormed the capitol" is a lie.

Then, "MAGA did take over the capitol and you should be proud!"

But again it wasn't violently storming the capitol. Nancy Pelosi and the Congress Kritters are running around saying Pence must invoke the 25th amendment right now because Trump incited his supporters to violence.

These clips prove that there was no violently storming in. Whether the capitol police were helping Antifa plants or not, these clips show clearly MAGA did not violently storm the capitol. The police let us in and helpfully pointed out where to go (whether entrance or exit).

If this was exiting, it's awfully tame. Congress was said to be shut down because of a pipe bomb threat. This is a pretty tame exit for an alleged bomb threat.

Yes, it's all a part of a psyop. Some of it will be organic though as it infects weaker minds and they start parroting the enemy's narrative. This is part of the demoralization tactic.

If you want to understand it better, Hitler wrote about propaganda a bit and Lenin extensively. All-n-all, it's just marketing with a twist, I'm sure you can find most of techniques in psych and marketing textbooks.

And let's be honest, does this really seem like the party of pipe bombs? Pipe bombs are for amateur anarchists. With the number of people among us with military backgrounds, we could rig something a hell of a lot more dangerous if we were so inclined, but we're not.

Copy this video and spam it to everybody you can.

All the videos break the narrative. Focus especially on the one(s) of Trump supporters stopping the vandals, people minding the velvet ropes, standing around chatting with police, and the police waving people in.

Broadcast those as often as possible; We don't need to shock people with the videos of the murder of Ashli, or the guy being thrown off the balcony; We need people to see how few the violent ones were, and we need to find out if they were Antifa/BLM.

On Antifa, blast out the video of the police-escorted Antifa bus arrival too. There are boatloads of videos out there to choose from that pretty well show that the actually violent ones were so few that they were almost certainly outside agitators.

Remember also that the police continued to try and antagonize a violent response even after everybody left...

Showing up at Hotels and pulling the fire alarms at night so they could arrest people for breaking curfew. We didn't engage. They did and they were the only ones to take lives on the 6th.

That's the message all of us need to be blasting out there right now. Spam Google, Youtube, Twitter and Facebook with it if you have it, share it with those you know... Their narrative is built on a cobweb of evidence. WE CAN DO THIS.

Every video does but the narrative has already set in and it's impossible to uproot it. That's how they are able to maintain this shit for so long. It'll take a while before the great mass is deprogrammed, although, seeing how many have been freed of the MSM shackles in the last few months, maybe it'll pick up RPMs...

Because Antifa had been infiltrated by the military. Antifa infiltrated Maga that day, but they were also infiltrated themselves by the military who had secret cameras. That's why all this footage keeps coming out that destroy's the Deep State's false flag narrative.

Look I was in there, there were some pushing back and forth between cops and some groups of guys but nothing that serious. We made one major push to what we thought was the main chamber of the building and we got half way down it and that was when they decided to stop fucking around. The maced the whole crowd myself included. Possibly set off tear gas to get us all out of there. I don't really know because I was blinded for the next 5 mins or so. Luckily someone had water for me to flush my eyes out. That was the point when I realized that everything up until that moment seemed faked. Like we practically convinced the cops outside to not fight and we didn't want anyone to get hurt, same with the cops at the door. Truthfully seeing the video of the cops letting people through the first barricade was the definitive moment when I realized the whole thing was staged. The guard on the roof all had professional cameras out, I have photos of that plus video off snapchat news from the angle the "guard" was at. It was all staged to a certain degree. They let us in just enough to run wild but when we tried to enter the area that actually mattered is when they actually decided be guards and fuck us up. The truth is at any point they could have pulled their weapons and shut the whole fucking thing down because when they decided to crack down they cracked down on everyone. Women in their late 40's -50's getting maced. The whole thing now just seems so surreal.

Exactly, we occupied space in the ultimate sense, we made congressmen cower in fear, it was a robust show of strength without slipping into wanton violence (attacking random people, destroying the building, toppling statues ect) the only people hurt was the unarmed woman who was murdered by the police. This is something to hold onto, not to cast away on some stupid bullshit about antifa.

It makes us go from looking like ultimate chads to unhinged pussies, we are getting blamed with this no matter what the fuck you find anyway.
